To Mr./Ms. _____

Dear subscriber; we are here with the November issue of IRAMONIT. Like the previous four issues, this fifth one, too, presents, in addition to the domestic developments in Iran, background information regarding prominent regional and global issues and prognoses about the future. This issue, which we have deepened using information received from our sources in the field and includes a special file, prepared by researchers who are experts in their field and enriched with interviews, stands out as a valuable source of information for an accurate analysis of the developments at a time when the agenda is busy.

The report, which consists of nine articles and a detailed special file, comprises articles on monthly diplomatic maneuvers of Tehran; the way the Iranian policy of the U.S. will unfold under the Biden administration; the effect on the Iranian domestic politics of the U.S. presidential election; the role trust and interests rates play in the Iranian economy in the context of the elections; the mechanisms Iran employs to bust the U.S. sanctions on oil; the effect of the war in Nagorno-Karabakh on the Iranian-Azerbaijani economic relations; Russo-Iranian military-technical cooperation; the cyber dimension of the rapprochement between Israeli and the UAE and lastly, child marriage in Iran. Besides, like in every previous issue, we have produced a chronological compilation of several significant events that have taken place in Iran and around the world and enriched our report with infographics.

As the subject of our special file, we have put under the microscope the energy sector in Iran. This country, which is far from being able to play a key role in the world energy markets despite its huge oil and natural gas reserves, faces many obstacles in reaching its goals in the industry due to its obsolete technological infrastructure and sanctions. The analysis entitled "Challenges and Opportunities toward Iran's Energy Sector" seeks answers to such questions as whether it might be possible for Iran to play a more active role in the global energy markets in view of the possibility that the sanctions might be lifted and how the Iranian government could cope with the difficulties it will face, taking into account the effect of the sanctions on the Iranian energy industry.

I hope that the November issue of IRAMONIT will come in useful for you and your institution, and I wish to meet you again in the coming issues.

Dr. HAKKI UYGUR
Acting President
